Whether you are preparing for your next promotion, looking for professional development and enrichment, or working toward an additional academic degree, the UC Davis Extension Senior Fire Service Leadership Certificate Program will challenge you to understand and develop your own leadership style, and prepare you to lead an all-hazard emergency services organization.

Changes to the core administrative and delivery models of providing fire, medical and emergency services over the last decade have been dramatic—challenging us to grow and develop with the world around us. Senior and executive leaders must be ready to meet these challenges. They must have knowledge of the latest trends, best practices and exemplary models of service delivery and apply them within their own service organizations.

This exceptional program equips emerging leaders with the knowledge and skills to effectively lead modern fire, medical and emergency service organizations, integrate the latest technology and create a data-driven structure that is sustainable for whatever tomorrow holds. Led by industry leaders from across the country, this dynamic series reflects the International Association of Fire Chiefs’ recommendations for graduate-level education and self-development necessary for service as an executive fire officer.

Please join us for this unique, unparalleled opportunity. See you in class!

Director, Senior Fire Service Leadership Certificate Program
UC Davis Extension
New norms for fire, medical and emergency response organizations are driving rapid cultural change and pushing the limits of many long-held traditions in these fields. While emerging leaders are often highly skilled in the technical aspects of fire and emergency management, fast-paced promotions and rapid retirement rates have provided few opportunities to develop the management and leadership skills for necessary career advancement.

UC Davis Extension’s Senior Fire Service Leadership Certificate Program is designed to equip those seeking increased levels of responsibility, particularly new chiefs or those wanting to become chief officers, with the knowledge and skills to effectively lead modern organizations. Emphasis is placed on executive-level leadership development and management skills, such as financial management, negotiations and conflict resolution, and performance management. Participants also learn to identify solutions to obstacles, anticipate future hurdles, challenge traditional models of service delivery, and consider alternatives for organizing and deploying resources. You will also deepen your understanding of your own ethical and professional responsibilities.

Company and chief officers will unquestionably benefit from this program.
